Valuation

ESNAD Real Estate Valuation إسناد للتقييم العقاري

4.1 Valuation Approaches

Principal valuation approaches and Residual Method
Market Approach	The market approach provides an indication of value by comparing the asset or liability, or both, with similar or matching assets or liabilities for which price information is available. The market approach should always consider the volume of transactions, their frequency, the range of observed prices, and the proximity to the valuation date. The market approach should be applied and given significant weight in the following cases: A) If the subject asset has recently been sold in a transaction suitable for the basis of value. B) If the subject asset or similar assets are frequently traded publicly. C) If there are notable, recent, or repeated transactions in comparable assets.
Income Approach	The income approach provides an indication of value by converting expected cash flows into a single present value. According to this approach, the value of the asset is based on the income or cash flows generated by the asset or the costs it saves. The income approach should be applied and given priority and significant weight in the following cases: A) When the asset's ability to generate income is the key factor affecting its value from the perspective of a market participant. B) When reasonable forecasts are available for the amount and timing of future revenues from the subject asset, but reliable and relevant market comparisons are not available.
Cost Approach	The cost approach provides an indication of value based on the economic principle that a buyer will not pay more for an asset than the cost of acquiring an asset of similar utility, either through purchase or construction, unless there are unjustifiable factors related to time, inconvenience, risk, or other related factors. This approach provides an indication of value by calculating the current cost to replace or reproduce the asset and applying discounts for all forms of depreciation. The cost approach should be applied and given significant weight in the following cases: A) When market participants are able to recreate the asset with the same characteristics as the subject asset, without regulatory or legal constraints, and the asset can be recreated in a timely manner so that participants do not need to pay a significant additional amount to use the subject asset immediately. B) When the asset does not directly generate income, and the unique nature of the asset prevents the effective use of the income and market approaches. C) When the basis of value used is based on the cost of replacement.
Residual Method	The residual method is named as such because it refers to the amount remaining after subtracting all known or expected costs required to complete the development from the expected value of the project upon completion, taking into account the risks associated with completing the project. The resulting value is referred to as the residual value.

4.2 Valuation Analysis

4.2.2 Income Approach- Discounted Cash Flow Method

According to the International Valuation Standards “2025”, in the discounted cash flow method, the expected cash flows are discounted to the date of valuation, which results in a present value of the asset.... In some cases, discounted cash flows can include a final value that represents the value of the asset. The asset at the end of the explicit forecast period.” Given the expected change in the income of the subject property and its failure to reach full maturity at current revenue levels, the cash flow method was chosen to valuate the property using the income method and the explicit forecast period was determined in accordance with these inputs.

The explicit forecast period was determined based on the following principles and criteria:

- Future financial projections of the property: Including expected revenues and growth rates, using realistic data grounded in market analysis.
- Consideration of property maturity phases: Evaluating the time required to achieve revenue stabilization, based on market dynamics and the property's specific operational conditions.
- Comprehensive risk analysis: Covering market risks, operational risks, and assumptions related to occupancy and income levels.
- Market and economic indicators: Including demand and supply conditions in the sector, as well as broader economic trends impacting the mark

The analysis was conducted using a forward-looking approach that reflects the property's projected future cash flows. These cash flows were discounted using an appropriate discount rate that accounts for the risks associated with the property and overall market conditions. This approach provides an accurate representation of the property's current market value in accordance with international best practices.

4.2.1.1 lease data

The lease contract for the property being valuated was provided to us by the client according to the following information:

A market comparison was conducted to estimate the expected market rent for the property’s components, based on a systematic analysis of available market listings using the following methodology:

- Collection and analysis of market listings: Rental offers for comparable properties were analyzed based on location, area, and use type, considering the timing of the offers and their alignment with current market conditions.
- Comparison with similar properties: A detailed comparison was made between the subject property and similar units, with differences clarified through an adjustment table.
- Adjustment for differences: Necessary adjustments were applied to the comparable rental values to account for variations between the subject property and the reference properties.
- Adoption of derived results: The expected market rent for each component of the property was determined based on the analyzed data, with appropriate adjustments reflecting differences from comparable properties. Based on these detailed findings, the overall market rent for all components of the property was calculated.
